Women in Literature.

For the last year in particular see what a place "Woman" has had! Nor is it a bad compliment to grant that these books referred to have been the most successful ones of the year. There will come first in many minds Prof. Hardy's "But Yet a Woman," W. D. Howells' "A Woman's long, Pontotoc and Holly Springs were Woman," W. D. Howells' "A Woman's Reason," Edgar Fawcett's "An Ambitious Woman," and last, but by no manner of means least, was published that very bright little story by H. C. Burner, "A Woman of Houbt."
